THE deluge!

"LICK your flints" and "try it again."

WHAT OF IT? This is an off year, anyhow.

HUNTER is inclined to hunt up his majority.

WE have met the enemy and we are theirs.

WILL Hunter resign in favor of Rhoads? is a pertinent question.

IT was not a Democratic victory, but a Republican stampede into the ranks of the enemy.

CENTRE county made Republican gains this year which she would do well to hold with a similar advance next year.

UNCLE JAKE ZEIGLER is elected to the legislature from Butler county, and he will represent the newspaper element.

"AFTER a storm comes a calm and after a calm a fair wind," says the sapient seamen. The calm has followed the recent political cyclone. The Democrats must take advantage of the fair wind and shape a wise and patriotic course. It is their watch on deck.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR has recognized John Stewart as consul of the Republic of Paraguay, at Washington. This is not the John Stewart, we are sorry to say, who ran for governor the other day. It is true that that Stewart wanted an office badly, but this Stewart was more lucky.

THE Independents cheated their candidate for governor shamefully. Stewart believed that he would have two hundred thousand votes, but his followers sold him out by voting for Pattison, as directed by the Democratic bosses, and he comes out of the fight with less votes than Wolfe. Poor Stewart!

THE Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin says: "General Beaver, although stricken down by Democratic ballots, is no more dismayed than he was when stricken down on the field of battle by rebel bullets. He is just as patriotic as ever, and proud of having borne the flag through every county of the commonwealth during the campaign."

THE Empress Eugenie is very wealthy. Since the death of the Prince Imperial the Princess Beatrice has had her greatest affection. There are French people who fancy that the wealth of the Empress may benefit the Princess. The Empress is very nervous, and is easily excited. Reports state that she is thin and pale, and suffers greatly from rheumatism.

IT is not a little remarkable to find one of the Bonapartes, as an American citizen, joining in an address to his fellow-citizens on the subject of civil service reform. Anything in this line is a long way out of the traditions of that family. One might almost as soon expect a declaration of socialistic principles from the kin of Europe's arch autocratic usurper. It must be the climate that brings about so radical a change.

PHILADELPHIA having now proven beyond the reach of cavil or criticism that she is the foremost city in this hemisphere for the management of such undertakings as colossal exhibitions and enormous and overwhelming public celebrations and displays, must now, we think, feel the necessity of utilizing that energy in the accomplishment of vast and stupendous business enterprises and achievements like those which have made New York and Chicago so famous.

The Blundering Independents.

That the Independent Republican movement had no other object than to further the ends and aims of the Democratic party was proven beyond a doubt by the result of Tuesday, and the few—very few—Republicans who voted for Stewart can now see that at least two-thirds of the number whom they expected to support the Independent ticket have gone square into the ranks of Democracy.

The Philadelphia North American exhibits the blundering work accomplished by the Independents in that city in the following paragraphs:

"Had the Independent Republicans set out to demonstrate the need of political bosses to intelligently direct and shape the action of the multitude, they could not have done it more effectually than they have done in the gross mismanagement of their trust during the late canvass. Respectable mediocrity may sometimes go a great way in the condition of mistakes, but there is a mediocrity which aggravates a blunder and repels all sympathy for the blunderer. It seems to have been the fate of the Independent Republicans in this campaign to provide round men for square holes in the Executive Department. Even a large political business cannot be done on a small capital. The leaders of the movement made a very serious mistake in not retiring the chairman of the State Committee when he launched his famous boomerang letter.

"Does anybody doubt that the strength of the Independent Republican vote in Philadelphia to-day is not as much as 25,000 votes? We do not doubt it. Very few doubted it a week ago. What then became of the odd sixteen thousand votes on Tuesday? Does anybody pretend to be in doubt what became of those votes? A good deal has been said about trading on election day, but that the biggest part of the vote for Stewart in this city was traded off in the interest of Mr. Pattison is sufficiently demonstrated. Whether there was any consideration or not we do not know. It is said that word was passed to the protestants against bosses by certain men in the lead of the Independents on election morning, or not long previous, to vote for Pattison. That every candidate on the Independent ticket was traded off in this city on Tuesday is evident. This sort of work pertains to the machine, and it does not matter who does it. When Mr. Wolf left Philadelphia he expected not less than 20,000 votes for the Independent ticket here. He estimated the vote in the State at from one hundred thousand to one hundred and fifty thousand. It is doubtful if it shall be found so much as seventy-five thousand. The difference between what was estimated and what was cast goes to measure the faith of the managers of the revolt with the people; or else the management of the campaign for Stewart was too stupid for criticism."

The Legislature.

The lower branch of the state legislature, remarks the Altoona Tribune, will unquestionably be controlled by the democrats and that party will have a small majority on joint ballot. Unless there should be a vacancy in the United States senate by the death or resignation of Senator Cameron or Senator Mitchell, this joint majority will be of no special service to the democrats. Under all the circumstances a republican senate and a democratic house may not be a disadvantage to the people. Each party will act as a check on the other and there will be less danger of vicious or unjust legislation. No harm will be done to any just interest if the force of circumstance should urge republicans and democrats to agree, for instance, to fair and non-partisan apportionment bills. When one party has all the power it seldom resists the temptation to outrage justice by the adoption of an unfair apportionment. It is true a party seldom gains anything permanently by pursuing such a course, but it nearly always adopts it anyhow. It will be impossible for the next legislature to commit such an outrage on any portion of the people. There must be conciliation and compromise. Neither party will submit to injustice and the result will probably be a series of apportionment bills the fairest we have had in many years. On the whole, we are not sure that the election of a democratic house of representatives in Pennsylvania will do the republican party any harm. The democratic legislature of 1875 wonderfully strengthened republicanism. History may repeat itself.

THE Democratic papers relate that when one of the gentlemen who called on Mr. Pattison to congratulate him upon his election noticed his calm demeanor he gracefully exclaimed: "Why, Mr. Pattison, fame sits lightly on your brow." Mr. Pattison replied, "As well so as otherwise." Pray what did the successful candidate mean? He may have been perfectly imperturbed by the distinguished honor thrust upon him, but it seems to us his answer was exceedingly awkward. Can it be that the "boy Pattison" has not a proper appreciation of the high office to which he has been called? Please make more brilliant remarks, Mr. Pattison—don't be such a stick.

The Result in Pennsylvania.

It is easy to account for the great disaster of Tuesday, the 7th, when the power of office in Pennsylvania fell into the possession of Democrats. We believe the Republicans who opposed Beaver really supposed that he was influenced in everything by Cameron; they saw that if they voted for Stewart Beaver's election would follow, and they cast their ballots for Pattison. But in so doing they made a monumental mistake, and wronged one of the purest of men. Beaver is an Independent man. In 1881 the Philadelphia Times acknowledged that Cameron was afraid to nominate Beaver, because, if elected, Beaver himself would be Governor.

But in the following year—1882—it became apparent that Beaver was the unanimous choice of Republicans in every part of the State. Cameron saw how fruitless would be the effort to nominate a man of his own choice and was obliged to consent to the nomination of our gallant townsman. Nevertheless, Beaver respected Cameron and was not disposed to exult over his victory. Perhaps that was an obstacle in his way, but it was the honorable course.

There were disappointed Republicans who were jealous of Beaver. These immediately proclaimed that Beaver was the bosses' candidate, taking advantage of unfounded discontent in the Republican ranks. The result was another nomination. The leaders of this revolt never for an instant supposed that the candidates they had nominated would be elected. Although constantly losing the strength with which the movement began, the leaders kept up the excitement until the last moment and then gave their followers to understand that they should vote for Pattison. Without a thought of the consequenes the rank and and file pursued this course, and now thousands of Republicans in all parts of the State see the folly of their rash act.

General Beaver can endure the result. He is too pure, too great a man for defeat to injure. The men who voted for Pattison and the loyal Republicans who remained faithful—in short, all the people of the State—are those who will suffer the consequences. We opine that it will not require long for the evil effects of the work of election day to become apparent to all. Meanwhile, we can wait in patience, knowing that a return tidal wave will soon set in of such overpowering force as to forever bury out of the sight and hearing of upright, honest men Democrats, Independents and every other power that dares oppose truth and right.

History Repeated.

The result of Tuesday's election is not surprising when compared with the past history of politics in this country; neither is it all disheartening to the defeated. The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, one of the most reliable Republican journals in the State, alludes to it as follows:

Weak-minded people, who are tempted to believe the Republican party has received a fatal blow, may straighten their back bones out by considering a few facts of history. These Republican reverses are attributable to the very same causes that produced such overwhelming Republican defeats in 1874; it is a case of history repeating itself; that the men and measures that brought the results of 1874 are responsible for these defeats of 1882, will be denied by none, and that the only highway to a grand and decisive victory in 1884 is in an emphatic return to sound Republican principles, ought to be frankly admitted and promptly acted upon by all Republicans.

As the figures showing the Republican defeats of 1874 are highly instructive just now, let us recall a few of them:

States.	Republican majorities. 1872.	Democratic majorities. 1874.
New York	51,825	50,317
Pennsylvania	34,368	4,679
Ohio	34,208	17,202
Indiana	21,090	17,252
Illinois	56,240	30,506
New Jersey	14,180	13,233
Massachusetts	74,212	7,032
	286,123	140,221

Making a change of 426,404 votes in these seven States in two years time. That same year Democratic Senators were elected to succeed Republicans in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Connecticut, Missouri and New Jersey. In 1872 the Republicans of Pennsylvania elected 22 Republican members of Congress and the Democrats elected only 5 members; in 1874 the Democrats in this State elected 17 members and the Republicans only 10 members of Congress. In 1872 the Republican elected a total of 136 members of Congress and the Democrats 104 members; in 1874 the Republicans elected only 186 Congressmen—90 from the North and 16 from the South, and the Democrats elected 187 members—97 from the North and 90 from the South, thus giving them 81 majority, the largest majority they ever had in Congress. In 1876 the Republicans elected their President.

THE contrast presented by a truly noble man and one of a low, groveling kind is illustrated by the actions of General Beaver and the so-called Independent Republicans. Garfield was not Beaver's first choice in convention, but that venerated man received his hearty support. Beaver was not the choice of a small minority of the Republican party for Governor, but he was nominated. In revenge they defeated him. If he were disposed to play the heroic in politics he might exclaim with infinite more expression than Cæsar, "Et tu brute!" But being too honorable to be affected by the traitorous actions of those whose support he had a right to expect, he can afford to treat them with the silent contempt they deserve.

AWAY out at Council Bluffs, Iowa, a joint stock company has been formed for the purpose of manufacturing shot from iron. The company claim that thorough tests which have been made of their shot have proven it to be fully equal, and in some respects superior, to lead shot; and as it can be sold at a much lower price than lead shot, they will probably find a demand for all they can manufacture. No tower is required, as the shot is made by this process with less than three feet drop. The iron shot, it is said, cannot be distinguished from that made of lead.

WHAT a rush and a scramble there will be for places on "the hill," at Harrisburg, when Pattison is inaugurated. But, come to think of it, the Democrats and their assistants are opposed to the spoils system.

IT is unwise to attempt to make political capital from the effect of elections upon the stock market and we have always ascribed the decline which follows any Democratic success rather to manipulation than to any real feeling of insecurity on the part of investors. But the fact remains that it would be impossible for stock jobbers to put down the market unless they could play upon the fears of the conservative people who watched anxiously all the causes that may influence the value of securities, for the fact remains that there never was a party in any nation in the world which has so jealously guarded the public credit, and spared nothing that could make the note of the United States as good as gold. The Democratic party went out of power over twenty years ago with the United States a beggar in the loan market of the world at 10 to 12 per cent. The Republican party then came in, carried the country through the most expensive war ever waged, and has not only made good every promise to pay, but has in half a generation discharged more than a thousand millions of the debt and raised the credit of the country until it is higher than that of any other nation, not even excepting Great Britain, which is the clearing house and banking nation of the world. The Democratic party has done nothing to give us any hope that it will carry out such a policy, and hence the feeling of uneasiness at the possibilities of mischief from a party without any financial policy and a majority in Congress capable of working its own will without hindrance from the Executive.

THE latest returns indicate that both Illinois and Colorado have Republican Legislatures and will return Republican senators; but some doubt remains as to the result in Nebraska. The anti-monopolists and Democrats together exceed the Republicans in that Legislature, which choses a successor to Senator Saunders. What will be the outcome of such a state of things it is impossible to foresee. Without Nebraska, and with the other States voting as the present returns indicate, the senate will stand: Thirty-seven Republicans, thirty-six Democrats and two Readjusters. Any way Nebraska may go, the Republicans and Readjusters combined shall still have a majority.

IT hardly seems possible that so recently as 1877 the telephone was a toy; yet such is the case. At the present time $7,000,000 are embarked in the extension of the telephone in England, and this capital is already winning revenue of $500,000 a year. Until a very recent time the telephone business has been a monopoly in England, of which the postoffice held the controlling power, but this has been broken, and it is said that a very strong competition will very shortly be felt.

IT was in the power of Secretary Folger to precipitate a panic upon the New York stock market in revenge for his defeat on Tuesday, for if he had not ordered the further prepayment of bonds, with interest to the date of redemption, there is no knowing what rates might have been asked for money. As it was, he continued the same policy which he has always followed, and did all that he could to relieve the market from the disastrous consequences of a Democratic victory.

LYDIA S. CASSATT, daughter of Robert S. Cassatt and sister of A. J. Cassatt, recently first vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad company, died in Paris on Tuesday. Mr. A. J. Cassatt and family are on their way to Europe now and are not aware of this misfortune.

JOSEPH of Egypt apologized to his brother Benjamin for accusing him of stealing his cup. The Democrats will now be ready to apologize to Benjamin for charging him with stealing the spoons?

GENERAL NOTES.

Cadillac, Mich., has an odd recluse who says he is St. Paul.

A steam tricycle, enabling the rider to travel at from fifteen to twenty miles an hour, with very little labor, has been invented by a Frenchman.

An Indiana farmer who was gored by a bull ten years ago, has not tasted beef since. Men once gored by whisky are generally more forgiving.

A Cincinnati wife caught another woman with her husband and filled his eyes with red pepper. The pepper certainly made it a very spicy affair.

The Veneto Cattolico says that a citizen of Vicenza has left a very large fortune to the Pope, "the first and greatest benefactor on earth of the poor and abandoned."

The British national debt has fallen from 839 millions sterling in 1857 to 763 millions to-day. Terminable annuities which will soon fall in will considerably diminish it.

William Schroeder drank ten whiskey cocktails in five minutes, to win a wager, at Denver, and his life was only saved by the use of a stomach pump and a galvanic battery.

An Ohio paper says, and probably correctly: "The South will make 7,000,000 gallons of cotton seed oil this year, and you will buy some of it nicely put up and labelled finest Italian olive oil, warrented pure."

Certain prisoners in Maine are described as "some of the most prominent men of Massachusetts." They went hunting for moose and deer in the season forbidden by law, and were caught by an officer disguised as a woodman.

Since 1879 France has imported more wine than she has exported. In 1879 2,100,000 hectolitres were imported, in 1880 5,958,000, in 1881 6,553,000 hectolitres. The bulk of this wine was from Spain, the rest being from Italy, Turkey, Hungary and Portugal.

The Rev Charles Spurgeon, son of the famous London preacher, told a Boston audience the other day that nobody had set wine before him since his arrival in this country, several weeks ago, and that he had seen none on private tables. He expressed his gladness thereat.

Morphiomonia, says the Medical Press, is becoming alarmingly prevalent in France, and among the ladies the small silver hypodermic syringe is an indispensable article of the toilet. Until quite recently the non-professional use of opium in France is stated to have been almost unknown.

Miss Thompson of Indianapolis was forbidden by her parents to encourage Van Horn as a suitor, as he was a drunkard. She would not give him up, and eloped with him. He got drunk on the night of their marriage, at a Columbus hotel, and she took a train for home, convinced that the old folks were right.

Poetry.

PRETTY NEAR SWEARING.

The Deacon sat in his easy chair,
One sweltering hot July day,
While the sun was shining with scorching beams
On the men who were making hay;
But the deacon had grown too old and weak
To handle the gleaming scythe,
So he left the work to his sturdy sons,
Who were supple, strong and lithe.

Now the Deacon was known as a good old soul
And the neighbors were wont to declare
That, though they had known him for many a year,
Yet no one had heard the man swear;
In fact, to say a word that was wrong
He was so exceedingly loth
That he used to affirm that nothing on earth
Could tempt him to utter an oath.

Well, the newspaper fell from the old man's hand
As he settled himself for repose,
While the common house-fly that was watching his prey
Flew down on the Deacon's nose;
But the hand of the ma flew up instanter
To punish the fly most severe,
But the fly had flown and was pluming itself
On the edge of the Deacon's ear.

He struck his ear, then smiled as he said,
"I guess I have killed it now!"
But the fly was having a walking match
On the Deacon's well polished brow;
And so the head got a terrible crack,
While the fly got a gentle tip
That made it laugh as it dug its toe-nails
In its victim's upper lip.

The deacon struck his mouth till it bled,
And his looks were full of despair,
While the fly was dancing a Highland fling
On a head that was guiltless of hair;
But when the fly, with sportive glee,
Stuck his foot in the Deacon's eye,
He said in a voice that was full of reproach,
"Oh! river obstruction that fly!"

AUTUMN.

The aster glows the falling leaves beneath,
The golden-rod gleams by the hedgerow brown,
As though the dying summer in the frost king's teeth
Had hurled her gauntlet down.

So when the shades of solemn silence sink
Upon us, and we reach l fe's latest breath,
The soul exultant bids, e'en on the grave's black brink,
Defiance unto death!

We perish not. The mounting spirit towers
In conscious immortality sublime:
And gains, beyond death's feeble, fleeting winter hours,
Eternal summer time.

Our Story Teller.

Twice Wooed.

"Tessie, my dear, how you loiter. There it is almost six o'clock and Mr. Vane will be dreadful impatient. Try and bring a little life into your face; you do not appear as happy as a bride should."

"I am a most unhappy one," I replied, drearily. "O, mamma, can't this farce be stopped? What is poverty to such shame as this I feel?"

You foolish, foolish girl! After all the trouble I have taken to bring about this fortunate match, you are mad to talk so. Here comes your bridegroom: greet him properly."

Mamma had no time for further admonition, as the bridegroom and the attendants entered.

"My dear, it is almost time to go down," said Royal Vane, bending his dark, penetrating eyes upon my poor pale face in a way I felt, if I did not meet his gaze.

Silently I took his offered arm and went slowly down stairs into the brilliantly lighted room, where the minister awaited us.

Oh, such utter silence prevailed! Only the grave tones of the minister as he repeated the beautiful, solemn ceremony, could be heard.

At last he came to the question. "Will you take this man," etc.

I heard it all too plainly.

I saw my haughty mother's anxious face paling at my silence, and the surprise growing on many, many faces, but I could not speak a lie.

I knew the dark eyes of my almost husband were upon me, regarding me in pained astonishment.

Oh, it was a painful silence, broken at last by a resistless power I could not thwart.

"No, no," I pleaded, raising my eyes to Royal Vane's white, sorrowful face. "I do not love you. I cannot be your wife. Oh, how wicked, how weak I have been not to have told you sooner!"

Then, turning around to mamma, I stretched out my arms.

"Forgive me—oh, forgive me, mamma," I cried and fell down at her feet in a dead faint.

They told me afterwards how mamma explained that I had not been well and was, no doubt, delirious, and that it would all be right when I recovered; but I knew that one person would never consider my actions caused by the delirium of fever—Royal Vane had understood the truth instantly; I read it in his white, stricken face.

"Of all the disgraceful, dreadful scenes," wept mamma, "I little thought that you, Tessie, would cause me such shame and mortification."

I was really ill for several days, but one day, when almost recovered, they brought me a card.

I shuddered when I read the name—Vane

"Go down," said mamma, angrily, "and let him see how a little fool has disgraced his bridal and wrecked his hopes."

I went down trembling, dreading his reproaches; but I need not have been in such trepidation. It was one of the calmest, kindest faces albeit care-marked and older looking, that met my gaze.

He came instantly forward, and in a quiet voice, asked:

"How is Tessie to-day?"

"Better," I faltered, "but so ashamed. Oh, Mr. Vane, try to forgive me! I wanted to tell you long ago, only mamma would not let me."

"Yes, I understand that, and it was better even at the last moment than a whole lifetime of regret.

And then so adroitly and skillfully he drew from my weak armor of subterfuge the story of mamma's embarrassments and need, and understood matters as they really were.

"Do you love anyone else, Tessie?" he inquired before we parted.

"No," I said, "no one; only as I did not love you I could not be your wife. Here is your ring."

"The poor little empty ring," he said, sadly, tenderly slipping it on his watch chain, "that once graced the hand of all the wife I shall ever know. Good-bye, Tessie, and may Heaven bless you."

And he was gone.

A week later mamma, jubilant and excited, came to me.

"My dear Tessie, you are a treasure after all. In your usual silly way you let Royal Vane know of our stringent circumstances, and he made us rich.

"Mamma, "I cried, feeling the hot blood of mortification rise in my temples. "You surely will not accept it of him. Oh, the shame—the shame!"

And I broke down and sobbed bitterly.

"It is your own doings, and it is all arranged so that we cannot avoid profiting by his generosity. The mortgage is paid and you may yet make a suitable match when this little affair has blown over," said mamma, complacently adding: "By the way, Royal Vane has gone abroad. It was the wisest thing he could do. He will return in a few years with a bride I daresay."

Long after she left me I pondered in deep mortification of spirit, the circumstances so bitterly humiliating that surrounded us, and wondered, vaguely, how long Royal Vane would remain in Europe and if mamma's surmise would prove true, and, by the very perversity of my woman's nature, I felt a slight twinge of jealousy in regard to his possible bride.

* * * *

Two years crept by and mamma had not succeeded in bringing about the suitable match she had set her heart upon.

"Of all the ridiculous, old-fashioned girls I ever knew you are the stubbornest. What am I to do with you? Are you determined to be an old maid?"

"Yes, mamma."

"Royal Vane has returned, I hear; perhaps you can persuade him to attempt making you his bride again. I think he is far too wise and—"

"Mamma, do not speak to me so," I pleaded earnestly. Royal Vane feels no worse contempt for me than I feel for myself."

At a party one night I saw him again for the first time since his return—handsomer, graver, but the lion of the evening. Was it possible that he had ever loved me? I could scarcely believe it and crept back in an alcove that, myself unseen, I could behold him to my heart's content.

By and by I perceived our hostess bring him direct to me, and trembled with mingled dread and pleasure; but when he addressed me in his calm, pleasant way I grew more composed—that is, until some one in passing him asked:

"Did your wife accompany you?"

My heart stood still.

I saw him smile and shake his head but failed to catch his reply.

The room swam, the lights danced.

"The heat is great," I faltered.

"Let us go upon this veranda. You look ill. Come."

I gladly went, drinking in strong, fresh draughts of the cool, evening air.

"Did you say your wife"—I began, but could go no further.

"Tessie," he said gently, "do you see this?" and he held up my old engagement ring. "The only wife I ever had wore this a very little while."

And then it must have been the moonlight that betrayed my relief for he exclaimed:

"Tessie! Tessie, what do I read in your dear eyes? Will you wear this once more?"

I allowed him to put it on my finger; then I flung my arms about his neck and sobbed for sheer joy.

"I loved you always, only I did not know it—not until you had gone away. For all the sorrow I have caused you I will try to repay by a lifetime of devotion."

And when once more we stood before the minister there were given two earnest, heartfelt responses.

Blaine at School.

It was a characteristic of James's nature in those early days not to allow himself to be unjustly imposed upon. He was always ready to take his part. It appears when Blaine attended the Brownsville school he wore trousers that had undergone such rough usage as to make it necessary to have them mended. A number of the girls at the Brownsville school commenced teasing James about his mended trousers. He became somewhat incensed at them, and the more it irritated him the more they called after and taunted him with "Patched Pants." He made a studious effort to catch them and box their ears. He was no more backward in administering those doses than he was in walloping rebel brigadiers on the floor of Congress during the latter days.

One of the Brownsville maidens told me to day that she remembers distinctly the days when she and her sisters used to fight with James and tease him about his 'patched pants.' Little did they think that the Pennsylvania boy with 'patched pants' would follow the 'railsplitter' of Illinois and the 'canal boy' of Ohio.

Seven or eight flies in enamel are considered chic—that is to say, "fly."

The Dark and Bloody Ground.

The correspondents at Ashland, Kentucky, says the Philadelphia Times, speak with sympathetic feeling of the many innocent spectators on the river bank who were shot during the remarkable fight between a company of militia and a mob. It has been observed very often on occasions of this kind that it is the passive bystanders who usually suffer most. The further observation may be made that the passive bystanders are often those who are most responsible for lawless outbreaks.

In the present case there was not the least excuse for a resort to mob law even if such an excuse ever can be found in an organized community. The two murderers were not taken red handed, nor was there any apparent danger that they would escape punishment. They were in the hands of the law, and it was the evident duty of all who sought the safety of society to take care that the law should deal with them impartially. But the people of the neighborhood were not satisfied with this slow process. They wished to expedite the administration of justice in a way of their own, and it was only when they found the Governor determined to uphold the law that the "sober man" of Ashland, as we are told, "gave up all hope" of mobbing the prisoners. It was "against the advice of sober men" that the younger and more daring spirits undertook their expedition, but the sober men nevertheless stood by, with their wives and children, to see the fun, and some of them got hurt.

It is a bad business altogether. The loss of life was probably unnecessary. State troops are almost of necessity inexperienced and therefore reckless. And yet it is hard to feel much sympathy with the mob. The Governor had a clearly correct conception of his duty to defend, at every hazard, the regular administration of the law, which is the only safeguard of public peace and order, and the outlaws—whether sober men or drunken—who undertook an armed defiance of all that makes life secure were much more dangerous enemies of the community than the miserable wretches whose lives they sought.

Such a collision as that near Ashland may be not wholly calamitous if it teach the lesson so much needed in many parts of the South and West, that the public safety can only be maintained by a loyal adherence to the laws under which the community has agreed to live. In a new settlement, where the machinery of courts and juries has not been established, lynch law is the only attainable substitute. It may be despotic and cruel, but it is the expression of the power of society to protect itself. But as civilization extends and order takes the place of disorder, mob law is no longer a safeguard, but a menace, and a community where a resort to mob law is looked upon with tolerance must be lacking in the capacity for organized self government.

The First Popular Vote.

On Sunday, October 29, the subjects of the Italian government—at least, a portion of them—indulged in what they please to call a popular election, members of the chamber of deputies being the officials for whom their ballots were cast. Signor Cocapieller, a violent radical, who had previously been known to fame only as a circus rider, was among the successful candidates. A portion of the press express disgust at his election and consider it a disgrace to parliamentary institutions. Regarding the progress in popular rule made in that country, the Philadelphia Press says:

"The elections held in Italy Sunday were in a certain sense the first popular vote cast since the monarchy was formed in 1859. The qualifications for voting, though amounting to little more than the poll-tax in American States, was enough to exclude vast numbers of newly naturalized Italians, among whom the possession of money is almost unknown. Under the forty lira provision—a lira is twenty cents—the electoral lists in Italy have never known above a half million voters in a population of 25,000,000! By the terms of the suffrage act adopted last year the money qualification is abolished and in its place is a requirement that the voter shall be able to read and write. But under this apparently liberal concession the Journal d' Italie computes that not more than two million voters can go to the urns.

"With this change in the suffrage, Parliament provided also for the election of its own members on a general ticket instead of a district ticket, as in this country and France. This was done to enable the leaders to make up something like a compact majority and minority party. Heretofore, as in France, the districts elected members on some special hobby without much reference to the general aims to be accomplished by a disciplined host, united for the carrying of certain well-defined principles and purposes into operation. It thus happened that no man or men could depend upon a majority to support a cabinet twenty-four hours. It was this incohesion which brought Gambetta to grief; for the members elected on district tickets, while calling themselves Republicans, frequently acknowledged no allegiance to the party principles and voted in Parliament as the whim moved them. Such a Parliament is more readily manipulated by the lobbyists, and that influence was not small in overturning Gambetta when he pushed the bill to reform the defect in the system."

Saving the Train.

The usual crowd of autumn liars were gathered together in the store, occupying all the grocery seats—the only gross receipts that the proprietor took no pride in—when a little clear eyed, brazen faced individual sneaked in by the back door, and slunk into a dark corner.

"That's him," said the ungrammatical bummer with a green patch over his eye.

"Who is it?" asked several at once.

"Why the chap who saved the train from being wrecked," was the reply.

"Come, tell us about it," they demanded, as the small man crouched in the darkness, as if unwilling that his heroic deed should be brought out under the glare of the blazing kerosene lamp.

After much persuasion, reinforced by a stiff horn of applejack, he began:

"It was just such a night as this—bright and clear—and I was going home down the track, when right before me, across the rails, lay a great beam. There it was. Pale and ghastly as a lifeless body, and light as it appeared, I had not the power to move it. A sudden rumble and roar told me that the night express was thundering down and soon would reach the fatal spot. Nearer and nearer it approached till, just as the cow-catcher was about lifting me, I sprang aside, placed myself between the obstruction and the track, and the train flew on unharmed."

The silence was so dense for a moment that one might have heard a dew drop.

"What did you do with the beam?"

"I didn't touch it," he replied; "but it touched me."

"Well," persisted the questioner, "if you couldn't lift it, how in thunder did the train get over it?"

"Why, don't you see?" said the sad faced man, as he arose from his seat and slid toward the door. "The obstruction was a moon-beam, and I jumped so that the shadow of my body took its place, and—"

Bang! flew a ham against the door; and if it had struck the body of the retreating hero, there would have been a bigger grease spot frescoed on the panel.

The Poor of Prussia.

We sometimes, says the Williamsport G. & B., hear moralists lament over the poverty of so many people in the community and indulge in idle dreams for their amelioration. There is no denying that there are in all communities families who are wretchedly poor and who will always remain so. Our only consolation is that in this particular we are far better off than many other countries. Prussia may be said to be the leading country in Europe to-day, and yet government statistics show that the masses of the people in that kingdom are hopelessly poor. Of the entire population, only 2½ per cent. have incomes that exceed $750 per annum. Those whose incomes range anywhere between $100 and $750 are 68 per cent. of the population. But this is not all, nor the worst; there are 19½ per cent. of the households of Prussia in which the yearly income does not reach $100. This is less than two dollars per week, on which more than one fourth of the families in that country must continue to eke out a miserable existence. How a whole family can manage to keep body and soul together on twenty eight cents per day is one of those problems which the helpless poor alone can solve. Yet these are the people who are compelled to support a standing army of half a million of men, who being consumers and non-producers are sapping the German empire of its very life blood. To these poor there comes no hope of bettering their condition. Their only care is to procure enough to sustain life. To lay by anything is utterly impossible. Even the possibility of emigrating is denied them. They cannot better their condition by coming to America, because they can never command the means. Unless relatives who are already in this country lend a helping hand, their present poverty must continue until the end. Is it any wonder that thousands of German peasants who can raise the money for a steerage passage seek to escape this thraldom of poverty by crossing the Atlantic to our more favored land, where hundreds of thousands of their countrymen have not only found homes and plenty, but attained wealth and position?

Queer Marriage Services.

A Hampshire incumbent recently reported some of the blunders he had heard made in the marriage service by that class of persons who have to pick up the words as best they can by hearing them repeated by others. He said that in his own parish it was quite the fashion for the man, when giving the ring, to say to the woman: "With my body I thee wash up, and with all my hurdle good I thee and thou." He said the women were generally better up in this part of the service than the men. One day, however, a bride startled him by promising, in what she supposed to be prayer-book language, to take her husband "to 'ave and to 'old from this day fortn't, for betterer horse, for richerer power, is siggerness health, to love cherries and to bay." What meaning this extraordinary vow could have conveyed to her own mind the incumbent said it baffled him to conjecture.

Prof. Powers' model for the bust of Garfield, for Ohio's memorial niche in the old Hall of Representatives, Washington, has been finished and placed on exhibition at Columbus, Ohio.

Knowing All About it.

"Of course," said the old gentleman, the life of the boarding house all summer, "you remember that Washington had command of the famous cuirassiers at Waterloo?"

"Certainly," replied young Dobbs.

"And that if McClellan had brought up his reserves in time the Greeks would have been driven from the field before Hannibal could have made his impetuous charge?"

"Yes," replied Dobbs, with the air of a man who knows all about it; "yes I have heard it so stated."

"Why," continued the old gentleman, "you know what Darwin says about it?"

"Yes," replied Dobbs feebly, wishing in his heart of hearts that he did not know. But the old gentleman relieved Dobbs' mind by adding: "Darwin, you know, says that the tide of battle might have been turned at any hour of the day had Grant not failed to double-shot his Gatling guns."

"Of course," echoed Dobbs, with a triumphant look at the listening ladies.

"But," said the old gentleman once more, "I think Darwin hardly correct. If Arabi had not defeated Nebuchadnezzar at Malvern Hill, it is my opinion that Cæsar would have routed Grouchy's guerrillas and then beaten Cairo's sharpshooters in detail."

"Thats the way I look at it," replied Dobbs.

"Oh, it is, is it?" the old gentleman, winking at the ladies. "Well, I'm glad I've found a gentleman who can agree with me on that point.

The gentleman walked away, leaving Dobbs as happy as a lord, he had made such a good impression, you know. But Dobbs would give something nice to know what the women-folks were giggling about, confound them!

Facts About Editors.

When you write to an editor, send a three-cent stamp. It will be a great curiosity to him.

Editors are slippery fellows. They have an unrivaled facility for slipping out of the door just after publication day.

An editor's veracity will do to gamble on. He never lies except for a consideration, or in the plain discharge of his duties.

Never ask an editor to drink, unless you have good credit or an extra dime. You might cause him a painful disappointment.

When an editor's hair scales off and the top of his head begins to look like the skin of a cowhide attribute it to wisdom—not wife.

An editor never steals. He always gives full credit, and he don't write "Ex" after an article. There are a number of brainless scalawags in the profession who pass for editors and who steal, but they don't have the pure ring.

When you shake hands with an editor don't squeeze his fingers too hard, for they may be covered with valuable diamond rings.

When you owe an editor a dollar don't pay him, for the shock might be too great for his nervous system.

When you visit an office mix the editor's exchanges; he has plenty of time to straighten them. Steal them if you want to; he will not need them. Besides it is fashionable.

If you are a mean man don't mention the name of an advertising agent to an editor, for it will thrill his soul with delight and cause him to smile. And when an editor smiles the bark peels off and the air turns blue.

The Newer Arithmetic.

A human body weighing 160 lbs. falls fifty-five feet per second. How long will it take a baby weighing thirteen pounds to fall down a pair of stairs fourteen feet high?

The average cost of curing a sore throat is thirty-seven cents, and the number of sore throats in this country average 21,000,000 per year. How much could America spend going to the circus if our throats were brass lined?

A young man about to be married figures that $8 per week will support the family in luxury and erect a five story brick building out of the savings of three years. How many days after his marriage before he will tumble to bean soup?

It costs a political candidate $25 per head to retain thirty loafers to slug him through a convention, and $150 for incidental expenses. How much is he out altogether, and in case he is left, how long will it take him to make himself good by hoeing corn at $1 per day?

Adam and Eve.

We presume there is nobody who envies the situation of Adam and Eve, in the Garden of Eden, so much as the business man, who has to work sixteen hours a day for seven days in the week, and lay awake half the night thinking of how he can do two hours work in one on the morrow. To think of those two people there alone, with nothing to do but stand off snakes and enjoy themselves, seems a picnic to the brain worker of to-day. Adam did not have to get up in the morning at six o'clock and swallow a cup of coffee on the jump, in order to catch a car and be at the office before the rest of the men. He could lay asleep, and get up when he got ready. Adam did not have to break in new boots, or worry because his pants were getting thin, and out of style. He could go bare footed, and sit around on the veranda and enjoy himself, and Eve would sit near him, piercing a silk quilt, knowing he wouldn't go down town and stay all the evening to see a customer from the country on business. Just think of the fishing and hunting that Adam must have had. The garden of Eden must have covered a good deal of territory, and probably there were quail, and jack snipe, and wood cock, and canvas back ducks, and mud hens, and everything just as we have them to this day. We can imagine Adam with a breech loading shot gun, and his fig leaf hunting coat pockets filled with cartridges, loaded with four drams of powder and No. 5 shot, on a point in the lake where the ducks were in the habit of flying over, just more than mowing them down, while Cain and Abel picked up the ducks and carried them for him. He didn't have to worry about business because everything he wanted grew in the garden, and he could hunt all the fall if he wanted to. We often think of Adam, when we go off for a day's shoot, and wonder if it wouldn't have made his head perspire if he knew he had got to get back and write a dozen columns of funny matter for a paper. The old sinner had a picnic, and he was a blasted fool not to stay there till this time. It is probable that Adam had some days that were not pleasant for shooting ducks, but he could stay in the house if it was bad weather. If the weather got too cold, along in November, though the ducks might be flying for all that was out, Adam wouldn't be likely to go out with that hunting coat of his and stand in the wind for a few ducks, because it would be apt to blow his coat off, and then he would catch cold and have to go home a with lame back and a cold, and have Eve put a porous plaster on him, and make him some ginger tea and soak his feet in mustard. One can imagine Eve doing her level best to cure Adam of cold, and telling him that he ought to know better than to go out shooting without putting on some extra fig leaves. We wonder if Adam had a flask with a tin cup on the bottom, to carry in his pistol pocket, with something in to cure snake bites. From all accounts there was urgent need of some such an arrangements, as nobody seemed to be safe from snakes there in the garden at all. And yet, few business men, with all the headache and worry, would care to exchange places with Adam for a permanent investment. They might like it for a few weeks in the fall, but in the winter they would be mighty glad to get back to their offices, with the nice grate fire and easy chairs, and the letters coming by every mail with money in them.

A Man Worth Millions.

Daniel Murphy, the well known cattle king and one of the largest land owners on the Pacific coast, died at Elko last Sunday morning, of inflammation of the bowels, after an illness of but a few days. Daniel Murphy was born in Nova Scotia in 1825, and at the age of 15 settled in Missouri with his father's family. At the age of 19 he crossed the plains and settled at San Jose, California, in 1844. After the discovery of gold he mined for a time, then turned his attention to stock-raising, remaining in the cattle business ever after.

In January, 1851, Mr. Murphy was married to Miss Mary Fisher, daughter of Captain Fisher—one of the early settlers of California and formerly a Cape Cod sea captain—by whom he had six children, three of whom died in infancy. Of the three remaining children the eldest, a daughter, since deceased, was married to C. E. Chapman, of San Jose, and two children, the result of this union, are living. The two surviving children of Mr. Murphy are Miss Diana and Daniel Murphy, Jr.

He had amassed a very large fortune in lands in California, New Mexico and Arizona and he probably owned more land and a greater number of cattle in Nevada than any other man in the State. His estate is variously estimated at from $2,000 000 to $4,000,000. Although owning a palatial residence at San Jose, California, he preferred to spend the most of his time at Halleck Station, on the Central Pacific Railroad, in Elko county, which place was his business headquarters.

It was the last act of a new comedy, and the house, half empty at the start, was nearly deserted, only a few dead-heads remaining. The curtain went up, and the leading man began with his line: "Are we alone?" The utility man glanced over the auditorium and answered in tragic tones: "We are." For the first and last time the audience laughed.

Mrs. Winslow was a sooth-sayer.

of all diseases arise from deranged kidneys and liver, and it strikes at once at the root of the difficulty. The elements of which it is composed act directly upon these great organs, both as a food and restorer, and by placing them in a healthy condition, drive disease and pain from the system.

For the innumerable troubles caused by unhealthy Kidneys, Liver and Urinary Organs; for the distressing Disorders of Women; for Malaria, and for physical derangements generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of imposters, imitations and concoctions said to be just as good.

LATEST TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

Allegheny County.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 10.—The successful candidates for assembly from Allegheny county are as follows: First district, Nicholas H. Voegtly, John Parkhill and James Llyraham; Second district, Robert M. Snodgrass and Samuel L. Mawhinney; Third district, Charles Deegan; Fourth district, Samuel M. Lafferty, Robert M. McClaren, Andrew C. Robertson and William Weihe; Fifth district, William E. Thompson and John W. Morrison; Sixth district, Nicholas Houge and John W. Nessbit. The delegation is republican with the exception of Deegan and Weihe, who are democrats In the senatorial contest Hugh McNeil was successful in the Forty-second district and William F. Aull in the Forty-fourth district. Both are republicans.

The Illinois Election.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—The result of the election in this state for state officers is still in doubt. Official returns from eighty-five of the one hundred and two counties in the state give Smith, republican, for state treasurer, 7,857 majority over Orendorff, democrat, on the basis of former elections, the remaining seventeen counties will increase rather than diminish this majority. But the results thus far have been so unusual that this can be counted on with no degree of certainty. Stratton, republican, for superintendent of public instruction runs behind his ticket and the result between him and Raabs, democrat, is problematic.

President Arthur's Movements.

NEW YORK, November 10.—President Arthur was busy to-night making preparations to leave his house to-morrow. He will be the guest of Charles E. Miller during his sojourn in the city. The president had important business with his partner, Sherman W. Knevals, to night. The president has decided not to leave for Washington till Monday.

Later information says the president will go to Washington from New York to-morrow. It was rumored to-day that John C. New had tendered his resignation as assistant secretary of the treasury, but owing to the absence from the city of the president and New it was impossible to obtain any authentic information on subject.

North Carolina.

RALEIGH, Nov. 10.—Unofficial returns, and in some cases estimates, from eighty-four counties indicate the election of Bennett, democrat, for congressman-at large by a small majority. The official count may be necessary to determine the result. The result in the Seventh district between York, coalition, and Robbins, democrat, is in doubt.

Crawford County.

TITUSVILLE, Pa., November 10.—J. J. McCrum, a prominent and influential democrat of this city, who led the poll in Crawford county, is suggested by his friends for the speakership of the next house.

Hale Pulls Through.

CONCORD, N. H., November 10.—Two hundred and thirty-three towns give Hale a plurality of 1,240. Hale's majority is 324. The three remaining towns in 1880 gave 50 democratic majority.

Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., December 10.—Bats, for governor, is 26,000 ahead. The legislature is largely democratic. The republicans elect but two congressmen, Pettibone in the First and Houck in the Second district.

Four Tons of Powder.

WHITE HALL, N. Y., Nov. 10.—Four tons of powder exploded at the Kreman lime works to-day, killing two men. It is supposed they had been smoking.

The Recent Indian Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 11.—A dispatch from Victoria, B. C., says The United States revenue cutter, Thomas Corwin, which has arrived from the north brings particulars of the recent fight with Indians and destruction of a village. The village destroyed was located at Hochinso on the Alabama coast. The tribe has seized and held two white men and a steam launch which had been sent out with a tug for whales. The launch was provided with a bomb which was being fired when an explosion occurred and an Indian chief, who was on board, was killed. The tribe surrounded and captured the launch with two white men and nearly succeeded in getting possession of the tug. The latter got away and steamed to Sitka. The Corwin with her captain and sixty sailors and mariners was dispatched to Hochinso. Captain Merriam demanded the surrender of the launch and prisoners which was refused. The next morning a gatling gun was placed on the beach and a force landed and destroyed all the canoes. The Indians fled to the woods and the village was shelled, the huts that remained standing after the shelling being looted and burned. Several warriors who ventured out of shelter were killed. This severe lesson was necessary as the tribe has been guily of many acts of cruelty to the whites. Hearing while in Alaska that Indians had taken possession of one of the American fur trading company's stations and held all the employes prisoners, Commander Healy went to their relief and found the Indians very hostile. He shelled their village and released all the prisoners. The village was totally destroyed and two chiefs were made prisoners.

Fire in an Oil Wagon.

READING, November 12.—A runaway horse pulling a wagon all ablaze in the public streets here yesterday caused considerable excitment. O. S. Swartz, who has the city neptha lights in the suburbs in charge, was filling a lamp, which was lit, when the wind blew the flame into the can and the oil exploded, throwing the burning fluid in all directions. Some of it fell into a forty gallon can in the wagon, and it exploded with a loud report. The wagon was instantly ablaze, and the frightened horse ran off. A ladder upon which Mr Swartz was standing was knocked down, throwing him under the wheels. He was severely burned and otherwise injured. The horse ran a considerable distance until the wagon was almost consumed.

Auroral Displays.

PHELPS, N. Y., November 13.—Professor Brooks, of the Readhouse observatory, reports the observation of a magnificent aurora display early this morning, the grandest in many years. A vast brilliant arch illuminated the landscape, equal to the light of the moon in the first quarter, followed by immense streamers and waves of light, projected with startling velocity from the horizon to the zenith. Great metereological disturbances may be expected.

Will Contest.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 13.—The city register has concluded the canvass of votes cast in the Ninth congressional district and gives Dr. J. H. McLean, republican, a majority of 21 over James O. Broadhead, democrat, for the long term. Broadhead will contest. For the short term Broadhead has a majority of 205 in the city, but the county precincts overcome this and give McLean 100 majority.

A Close Shave.

RICHMOND, Va., November 10.—Returns from the last counties to be heard from in the First district show gains for Mayo, coalition, which ensure his election by about 200 majority.

RICHMOND, Va., November 10.—The election of John Wise, coalition candidate for congressman-at-large, is now a foregone conclusion and it only requires the official figures to fix his actual majority

Exhibition of Bottlers.

PITTSBURGH, November 13.—The first international exhibition of bottlers will open at Turner's hall, in this city, to-morrow morning and continue the balance of the week. Exhibitors will be present from England and all parts of the United States, with machinery and appliances peculiar to the trade. The exhibition promises to be a great success.

A Defeated Candidate.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 10.—The Times-Democrat's Dallas, Texas, special says: "At Henrietta last night C. M. Burgess, the defeated candidate for county judge, shot and instantly killed R. M. Donley, a young lawyer, who had spoken ill of him during the campaign. Three shots were fired. The tragedy has produced a decided sensation."

Pattison's Majority.

PHILADELPHIA, November 10.—Returns from every county in the state, of which fifty-six are official, give Pattison 38,850 plurality over Beaver. Pattison has a plurality in forty-eight counties and Beaver in nineteen.

Blaine.

BOSTON, November 10.—Ex-Secretary Blaine said to a personal friend in this city to-day: "I wish it distinctly understood that I am not a candidate for the presidency or any other political office, and nothing can induce me to become such."

What They Say.

Postmaster Johnson is too surprised to speak.

Chairman Hastings dolefully says: "It's all up with us." We think down would be a better word.

Ex-Chairman Rankin says: "Well, when you're knocked down all you have to do is to get up again."

Our good friend, Manager Malin, gazes lugubriously at the 175,000 and wonders if they won't increase to 400,000 before the returns are all in.

Coal merchant, Lawrence Brown has an eye to business. "Now mark," says, "the weather next winter will be as cold as charity and it will take some of the ardor out of these Democrats when they pay their coal bills."

"Who is the Arthur of all this?" exclaims Mr. William Shortlidge.

Adolph Loeb, the proprietor of the oldest general merchandise store in Centre county, salutes his "unterrified" friends with the exclaimation: "I'll bet—no I won't, either," he concludes as his hands convulsively close over his wallet.

Mr. Isaac Mitchell puts his pen behind his ear and gazes intelligently at the long line of figures, trying in vain to find even a fraction which will afford him consolation.

The gentlemanly proprietors of the Phœnix Planing Mill had bargained upon hurrahing for somebody, and as the right man isn't elected they have begun to inquire into the prospect of a deep fall of snow followed in due time by a spring flood.

"Such defeats," says President E. C. Humes, of the First National Bank, "won't pay. We must try some plan to run Republican stock up a little higher next year."

Charley Hewes says, "Twenty per cent. of the New York Republicans stayed at home and refused to vote. That's what's the matter!"

D. S. Keller, Esq., is desperate: "There's a good time coming, boys, and then we'll have revenge," is what he says. He means it, too.

"This is the first time I ever tasted defeat," exclaims Captain Bayard; "it's worse than castor oil."

John B. Linn, Esq., views it with interest as the turning of another leaf in the history of Pennsylvania, about which he has written so much; and hopes when another leaf is turned it will tell a different tale.

H. C. Weaver, proprietor of the Cuban Cigar Store: "I bargained on 16,000 plurality for Beaver. What a revolution this is."

A majority of Republicans termed it a "Waterloo," but in reality it was even worse.

—While the Democrats are rejoicing over victory they should not forget to purchase cigars of Harry Green.

—The board of city trusts, of Philadelphia, are experiencing difficulty in their efforts to provide a successor to Dr. William Hewey Allen, late president of Girard College. The position brings with it a salary of $5,000 per annum and the privilege of occupying a handsome residence on the College grounds. There is no lack of capable men for the position, but the difficulty is to decide between the claims of these individuals. If a dark horse is desired the board might give our claims consideration.

—A young lady living in the south of England indulges in practices which would greatly shock some people. She hunts, has her own stable, keeps four hunters, now and then rides a steeplechase, buys and sells her own horses without help from anyone; has her own wine merchant, wine cellar and tobacconist; fences, boxes, skates and rows; has her boudoir decorated with foils, gloves, whips, horse shoes and hunting trophies; smoking cigarettes during the day and cigars after dinner; is a capital judge of claret and port and can tell Amontillado from Marsala with her eyes shut. Yet she has never been known to flirt, has refused more offers than the quiet ones ever dreamed of receiving, and once, it is related, taught the Prince of Wales a lesson by stopping in the middle of a valse with him at a state ball at Buckingham palace, and refusing to go on with him because he held her hand tighter than she considered proper. You can't call a girl like that fast. If she lived in Centre county she would purchase her groceries at Sechler's store. A young lady who evidently has such good taste could not refrain from doing so. Sechler offers inducements, not only to young ladies, but to all other persons which make it to their advantage to buy of him. Those who have never traded at his store should do so at the first opportunity.

—The Mill Hall furnace has shut down for want of stock. In all probability the furnace will use coke, and between now and spring accumulate a large stock of charcoal.

Death of Anna Mary Rankin.

One household in this place into which death never before entered is now shrouded in deepest gloom. At the hour of 12 Monday night an immortal spirit left its mortal tenement, burst the bars of death and ascended into realms of bliss of which we who live on this earth know almost nothing. Anna Mary Rankin, daughter of Joseph Alexander and Mary Blair Rankin, who for years had been an invalid, daily losing strength and severing one by one the ties which had bound her to life, at last passed away from her loving parents, brothers and sisters and has now entered upon the blessed life which awaits those who pass the dark valley of the shadow of death—not a "dark valley" nor a "shadow" to such a pure spirit, however, but a valley of light, illumined by the bright presence of her Redeemer. She had been ill for five or six years, during which she was a continual and loving charge to her relatives. Slowly and insidiously did disease do its work: First depriving her of educational opportunities, which she was then pursuing almost too eagerly for her own good; then prostrating her upon a bed of sickness; wearing away the tissues of life until the end came. Her friends hoped against hope and did not give up until the fatal hour. "Kiss me, mother," was her last exclamation. Her mother kissed her and felt the death dew upon her brow. Without a struggle she passed away, leaving an impress upon the sands of time which will be left forever.

The deceased was 24 years of age on the 25th of last September. Although so long an invalid she was well known and she will ever be remembered with sentiments of tender affection. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

The funeral will take place on Thursday at 2 o'clock from the residence of Joseph Alexander Rankin on the corner of Spring and Howard streets.

—Sechler's store is full of goods. The very best of all sorts of groceries may be found there. Call and be convinced.

—During a large part of Wednesday, the 8th, the water was turned off the main pipe running along Howard street, stopping the flow of water from the hydrants on Penn street and from all the pipes receiving their supply from that source. The residents of that section complain—not because the water was turned off, but because no previous notice was given, and they were deprived of the very necessary liquid without the opportunity of making preparation. Who is responsible?

—There is a look of liveliness about everything relating to Sechler's store. Quick sales and small profits is the motto.

—The Centre Democrat thinks Ellis Orvis a most effective campaign speaker. No doubt of it, but some how or other his effectiveness, added to the efforts of the other "boys," seems to have resulted in reducing the Democratic majority in the county about 400. Effective! Well, we should smile.

—Dr. Wilson, of this place, was ninety years of age on Friday, and the event was properly celebrated by his relatives and friends. We hope the aged gentleman will survive for many years to come.

—Do not give up hope, fellow Republicans; buy one of Harry Green's cigars and that will do much to calm your agitation.

—Exactly how much display it will be proper to make on the occasion of Pattison's inauguration is just now weighing heavily upon the minds and consciences of our Democratic citizens. Shall there be a grand demonstration to overawe the multitude or will it be better to make the ceremony simple and inexpensive? is a question which they find entirely beyond their mental capacity to solve satisfactorily. From what we have heard of Governor Pattison and judging from the pomp and circumstance he indulged in while campaigning, traveling as he did with a small and select company of kindred spirits in a magnificent palace car, we are of opinion that he will demand a splendid inauguration, unlimited in expense and imposing in proportions. Nothing less than that will suit his ideas of the fitness of things, residing as he does in the Metropolis of the State, where quite recently the Centennial and the Bi-Centennial, as celebrated in that city, have furnished to the world the most magnificent demonstrations of modern times.

Keep your Eye Open.

The last swindle on farmers, which generally succeeds on those who take no papers, is outlined in an exchange as follows: Two rogues watch the papers for estray notices and when one is published one of them goes to look at the animal. Of course on application the unsuspecting farmer shows the beast, and the fellow decides that it is not his and then returns to his partner and describes the animal minutely. No. 2 goes to the farmer, and after proving by a thorough description that he is the owner of the animal, says he can't take it away, offers to sell it at a bargain. The farmer buys and in a day or two the rightful owner comes and claims the animal, and of course the farmer is out just so much.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

THE North American Review for November presents an unusually diversified table of contents. "English views of Free Trade," by Hon. John Welsh, of Philadelphia, is a clear and forcible exposition of the dif

All About School Directors.

The following communication will perhaps be read with interest by school teachers and school directors:

POTTERS MILLS, Pa., Nov. 3, '82.

MR. EDITOR:—Will you allow space in your valuable columns for the following: As the time for the opening of the schools of our county has arrived, a few remarks on the directorship, the use and abuse of the office may not be inappropriate. Allowing that the important office of School Director is not the most pleasant, and is attended with duties that are onerous, irksome, thankless and entails very little public credit, yet when persons are elected to fill the office and accept the position they are legally and in honor bound to do all for the advancement of the schools and the benefit of the public educationally possible, by discharging the duties of the office honestly, honorably and legally. No man has any right to accept the office unless he intends to work for the welfare of the children of our schools, by judiciously prescribing the branches to be taught, providing the educational facilities necessary, and honestly and impartially selecting the text books to be used. Generally the public are little interested in the manner of conducting the affairs of our schools, until some unwise or unjust use of the power bestowed on those charged with their management has been made, when those whose interest is at stake, are awakened from their lethargy to find that the power they delegated to the veracious (?) director has been used for his own emolument in the shape of dictionaries, gratuitous educational publications, &c., or as a stepping-stone to some higher office nearer the county treasury, at the expense of the too credulous and confiding tax-payers.

Directors of Potter, you who are entrusted to direct and oversee the dearest interest of this nation—the education of her youth, are you discharging the duties of your office legally and to the best interest of your constituents? Are you working for their interest solely? Are three changes in text books in six years necessary? Was the last change for the benefit of the schools in this township? If so, state the wisdom of the change and the superior merits of the books supplanting the old ones. Was the change made legally? Does not the school law require you to call a meeting of "the directors or controllers and teachers of the district" for said purpose? You violated the law, for the teachers of the district received no notice of such meeting. Four years ago when a change in books was made a citizen, now the President of the Board, was very indignant and called a meeting of the citizens to resist the change. "It was an outrage, a speculation, &c.," now how changed his position! Stupendous change! "Consistency, thou art indeed a jewel." It is a remarkable fact that while Potter township is one of the richest rural districts in the county, perhaps no other district in the county has her schools so meagerly supplied with maps, school apparatus, &c. The reason for this the all-wise director will tell is—we are poor, we must be economical, &c. While we were supplied with most excellent text books in our schools, would it not have been more business like to have retained those books and supplied the beggarly walls of our school rooms with maps, charts, &c., and furnished each school with an unabridged dictionary, or school globe? as suggested by county Superintendent Wolf?

Directors should be paid a salary and certain qualifications be requisite to make them eligible to the office, viz: A thorough knowledge of the branches taught in our public schools; a comprehensive knowledge of educational means and facilities, requisite in our schools; that he be directly interested in education by having children to educate; that he be not an aspirant to office, so that he may not make the office a stepping stone to a higher salaried office, by grinding down teachers' salaries, refusing to supply the necessary apparatus and furniture, and practicing a system of false economy to shut the eye of the tax payer and thus beget a name as an economist; that he be a man of truth, one whose "yea is yea," and whose "nay is nay." It is time for our legislators to consider the policy of delegating so much power in so important an office, regardless of ability and fitness. Yours &c. M.

The Wedding Last Week.

At five o'clock Thursday afternoon a pleasant event occurred at the residence of P. W. Barnhart, Esq., at Curtin's Works. It was the marriage of his daughter, Miss Julia C. Barnhart, to our legal friend, H. H. Harshberger, Esq., of this place. Numerous relatives and friends of the happy couple were bidden to participate in the joyful event, and we can well believe that it was the occasion of much pleasure and rejoicing. Of the groom we can speak in terms of unlimited praise. He is the law partner of ex-Congressman Yocum, and is an exceedingly moral and industrious young gentleman. The bride is an accomplished, agreeable young lady, and will make a model wife. They departed on the evening train for Philadelphia and other places of interest. Our hearty congratulations and best wishes go with them on their honeymoon journey and we hope their married life will be one of unalloyed bliss.

—A writer in an exchange proposes a very simple cure for dyspepsia as follows: "A new and simple cure for dpspepsia was brought to my attention by Hon. Pope Barrow on Wednesday. He says: 'You know Webb Barber, in Athens. Well, sir, he has cured himself of dyspepsia by eating white sand. Just common white sand picked up in the bed of a branch. He says that chickens eat sand to digest their food with, and he did not see why men should not do the same thing with profit. He ate a dose of sand every day and it cured him. Judge Henderson, the commissioner of agriculture, told me last night he was eating sand for dyspepsia with good results.'" But Centre county people need not resort to sand as a cure for that disease. They have something much more pleasant to the taste in the groceries sold by Sechler & Co., and which are so healing in their nature as to prevent the progress of all disease and make the consumer sound and well. For pure groceries go to Sechler and you will be the gainer thereby.

—Mrs. Daniel Garrett, an aged resident of this place, died on Friday last. She was over 73 years of age. She was a devout Christian woman and the closing days of her life gave evidence of a signal triumph of the faith she professed. She could, in imagination, hear the rustle of angel's wings about her bedside and she longed for her earth's journey to end that she might enter upon the bliss of immortality. The funeral took place from her residence on the Lewistown turnpike on Sunday afternoon.

Influence of the Soil on Health.

The influence of the soil upon the health of those living upon it is brought out very plainly during the prevalence of epidemic diseases. That malarial diseases (like intermittent fevers) originate from the soil is already accepted; and recent investigations show pretty conclusively that the germs of cholera, abdominal typhus, yellow fever and the plague are in some way connected with the soil, which is daily corroborated by letters from all parts of the country, stating the marvellous effect Peruna has on those diseases, and in their convalescent state. John E Courtney, of Corry, Pa. Says: I am still getting better, thanks to your Peruna and Manalin. See page 24 in "Ills of Life."

PE-RU-NA

Is a new remedy, originally compounded and introduced to the medical profession, and then to the public at large, by S. B. Hartman, M. D. He has prescribed it to over 40,000 patients with the most gratifying results.

Its effect upon the system is entirely unlike that of any other remedy, and is the only medicine needed in almost every disease to which flesh is heir. (In Constipation, Diseases of the Liver and Kidneys. MANALIN should be given with it.

PERUNA is composed of purely vegetable ingredients, each one, according to medical authors, a great remedy in itself.

Dr. Hartman has succeeded in extracting and combining the active principles of these ingredients into one simple compound, which perfectly coincides with the VIS MEDICATRIX NATURA in every disease, and a cure necessarily follows. There is not an organ it will not reach nor a disease it will not cure.

Glorious News.

Bargains such as have never been seen since fig leaves were worn. New and reliable clothing at astonishingly low rates. Boots and Ladies' Shoes slaughtered. The people know that the great Boston Clothing House just opened in Reynolds' block, Bellefonte, means business when they say that they can and will sell better made and more stylish clothing, hats, cap, boots and shoes at just half the price of any other house in the county. There never has been, and there never will be, three words which express more than the following: "Knowledge is power," and the success which this establishment meets in furnishing clothing, boots and shoes to hundreds, yes, thousands of people throughout the county at prices away below the actual cost to the other dealers, may be attributed to the fact that they have a complete knowledge of the business. This enables them to purchase the best goods only, and to get up garments at a decided advantage over all other dealers. Call early and see for yourselves at the great Boston Clothing House just opened in Reynolds' block, opposite the Brockerhoff House, Bellefonte, Pa.

COURT PROCLAMATION.—Whereas, the Hon. Charles A. Mayer, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the 25th judicial district, consisting of the Counties of Centre, Clinton and Clearfield, and the Hon. J. G. Larimer and the Hon. J. K. Runkle, Associate Judges in Centre county, having issued their precept, bearing date the 16th September, A. D., 1882, to me directed, for holding a court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery and Quarter Sessions of the peace in Bellefonte, for the County of Centre, and to commence on the fourth Monday of November, being the 27th day of November, 1882, and to continue one week notice is hereby given to the Coroner, Justices of the Peace, Aldermen and Constables of said County of Centre, that they be then and there in their proper persons, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, with their records, inquisitions, examinations, and their own remembrances, to do those things which to their office appertains to be done, and those who are bound in recognizances to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the jail of Centre county, be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.

Given under my hand, at Bellefonte, the 30th day of October, in the year of our Lord, 1882, and in the one hundred and sixth year of the independence of the United States.

THE LATEST NEWS.

Pattison's Pluralities.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 8.—Official and estimated returns from every county in the state except Elk and Forest give Pattison 32,122 plurality for governor.

This city give pralities as follows: Beaver 3,604, Davies 6,836, Greer 6,681, Rawle 4,681, and Brosius, 8,592. The entire democratic state ticket is elected.

Atkinson, republican, is elected in the Eighteenth congressional district, defeating Kimmell by 1,000.

The Times estimates that the next state senate will have a republican majority of 10, a republican loss of 4 and the house of representatives a democratic majority of at least 30, a democratic gain of 37.

Allegheny county—The returns from Allegheny county received up to 1 o'clock this afternoon do not materially change the result on the state ticket, as telegraphed last night. Beaver, the regular republican candidate for governor, and the balance of the state ticket, have a plurality of about 4,000. In the congressional fight in the Twenty-second district, James H. Hopkins, democrat, has a majority over Russell Errett, republican, of about 1,200.

Huntingdon county—Pattison's plurality is 139. The balance of the state ticket is about the same, except Africa, who has 1,089. Atkinson, republican, for congress, has 589. Myton, republican, and Adams, democrat, are elected to the assembly. Stewart's vote is 758, Armstrong's 363.

Mifflin county, official—Pattison 1776, Beaver 1375, Stewart 182, Black 1786, Davies 1369, Duff 183, Africa 1804, Greer 1359, Merrick 158, Clark 1802, Rawle 1377, Junkin 184, Elliott 1824, Brosius 1426, McMichael 202; greenback-labor vote 225. For congress Curtin 1975, Orwig 1565. Parcels, democrat, is elected to the assembly by 614 majority.

Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, November 8.—Ex-Senator McDonald, chairman of the democratic central committee, claims 10,000 majority in the state. Orth, republican, in the Ninth congressional district, is certainly defeated. Pierce and Demotte, republicans, in Eighth and Tenth districts, are also defeated. This gives the democrats nine and the republicans four congressmen, a gain of four for the former. The democrats also claim the election of English in the Seventh Indianapolis district, but the republican committee claim the election of his opponent Peele by over 300 majority. The democrats will have a majority in the house of representatives and probably in the senate.

Fire And Loss of Life.

NEW YORK, November 8.—A fire broke out this morning in the five story building at Nos. 243 and 245 Pearl street, exteuding through to Cliff street, and caused a loss of $50,000. The fire was caused through an explosion in the paint and varnish store of Illsley, Doubleday & Co., it is supposed by a spark from an electric wire coming in contact with a quanity of varnish. The dead body of Fred B Doubleday was found in the store. Later another man, unknown, was found terribly burned about the legs. He was probably an employe.

New York.

NEW YORK, November 8.—The Post's extra puts Cleveland's majority at 174,000. According to returns received up to 11 a. m., the state legislature is strongly democratic.

The World makes Cleveland's majority 170,000, and that of Slocum, for congressman-at-large, 100,000. The latest reports increase the democratic majority everywhese, and indicates that 45 out of 60 counties in the state have gone democratic.

Delaware.

WILMINGTON, Del., November 8.—Complete returns from the entire state give Stockey, democrat, for governor, a majority of 1535. For congress Love, democrat, has a majority of 2200. The only office secured by republicans is that of sheriff of this county, their candidate, Martin, having a majority of 14. His election will probably be contested.

A Boy Killed.

DETROIT, Mich., November 9.—A boy named Willie Earle was found dead this morning near a dove cote, back of a neighbor's house, with a pistol ball in his brain. He went to a variety theatre last night with some other boys, which was the last seen of him. His companions are missing and a murder is suspected.

Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, November 9.—The Courier Journal's special from Mt. Sterling Says: Adams, democrat, defeats White, republican, for congress in the Tenth district by a majority of over one thousand. The Kentucky delegations stands ten democrats to one republican.

St. John Defeated in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Kas., Nov. 8.—The republican state, county and congressional tickets are elected with the exception of St. John for governor who is defeated by Glick.

Bull-Dozing.

MEMPHIS, November 9.—General James R. Chalmers, independent democratic candidate for congress in the Second Mississippi district, opposed Van H. Manning, the democratic nominee, in the city. In an interview he asserts that bull-dozing was practiced in Tallahatchie county, where the election was prevented from being held under the pretense of a fear of the small pox, which deprived him of 500 votes, and one box in Desoto count, where the judges refused to hold an election, which lost him 200 votes. Notwithstanding all these be carried his election on the returns that have been made by 1,070 majority.

Arabi's Trial.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—A dispatch to the Times from Cairo says that the Egyptian authorities have arrested a servant who was sent by some one of the rebel prisoners to the English counsel who are acting for Arabi and his fellows. Sir Edward Mallett, British consul general at Cairo, thereupon demanded that he be released. Arabi in prison is a greater curse to the people of this country than Arabi free. The colossal blunder of this trial of Arabi is now universally admitted.

A Railroad Smash-Up.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—A special from Quincy, Ill., says: A passenger train last night, about midnight, on the St. Louis, Keokuk and Northwestern railroad, collided with a freight train twelve miles south of this city. The smash-up was fearful. The fireman and brakeman and a passenger named Griffin, of Keokuk, were badly hurt Griffin's skull was fractured. His recovery is doubtful. The wounded were brought here.

Preparing for next Season.

READING, Pa., Nov. 9.—An interstate base ball association was formed here to-day. The Harrisburg, Trentons, Burlingtons, Actives, of Reading; Anthracite, of Pottsville, Quicksteps, of Wilmington, and Merritts, of Camden, were admitted to membership. One club from Philadelphia will be asked to join. The rules of the American association will be adopted. Another meeting be held in Philadelphia on November 25.

California.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—A San Francisco special says that the 26,000 votes counted in the city confirms last night's report of the probable result—a clean democratic sweep from the interior. Stoneman's majority increases as the returns come in. The senate will probably stand 28 democrats, 12 republicans; assembly, 57 democrats, 23 republicans. The defeat of Page is confirmed by further advices.

Secretary Folger.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—In a conversation on political topics this morning Secretary Folger expressed the opinion that until the existing breach was healed the republican party cannot consistently expect success at the polls. Judging from the tone of his remark the secretary never entertained the opinion of carrying New York.

Death.

NORRISTOWN, Nov. 9.—C. H. Garber, a member of the family poisoned last week by eating pie containing arsenic, died at noon to-day. Some of the flour from which the pie was made has been found to contain arsenic in crystals of purer quality than is usually sold by druggists.

Diptheria and Scarlet Fever.

READING, Pa., November 9.—The public schools of Birdsboro' were closed to-day owing to the prevalence of scarlet fever and diptheria. In one family as high as five children have died, and the disease is reported on the increase.

English Couple Divorced.

LONDON, November 6.—The court has granted a divorce to Mrs. Welesley against Colonel Welseley, son of the Earle of Cowley, on the ground of adultery, committed by Welesley with Kate Vaughan, the actress.

Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 8.—The republicans claim four congressmen. The democrats concede Cuthberston, but no others.

Goldsmith's Testimony.

Goldsmith speaks of

"That dire disease, whose ruthless power
Withers the beauty's transient flower."

No truer description could be given of the disease of the kidneys, which, uncared for, ripens into Bright's Disease, and cuts down our strongest men in a very short time. And if Goldsmith had known of Hunt's Remedy, he would undoubtedly have continued his poem, and spoke of

"Hunt's Remedy, whose matchless worth,
Makes it a boon to all the earth."

It is surely a boon to thousands of sufferers who have been able to find relief nowhere else.

"To the first widow of Lincoln who shall secure a husband after my death, I bequeath $500," was a provision in the will of a Nebraska widow. Just forty minutes after this became known the claimant appeared.

"Do you ever go to meeting?" asked a minister of a Blue-grass Kentuckian. "Certainly, sir, twice a year; spring meeting and fall meeting."

Matched Diamonds Worth $10,000.

"We have the largest pair of matched diamonds in the United States," was the answer a jeweler gave a reporter in St. Louis regarding what curiosities his house afforded the market. "We never exhibited them but once and they are still in the West, having created a sensation at the Denver Exposition. They are named Venus and Apollo and weigh together 52½ carats, being of a greenish-yellow shade. They formerly belonged to the Sultan of Turkey and no doubt were disposed of to preserve peace in the royal harem. In 1856 the Marquis of Hastings brought them from India and his wife wore them set in earrings. They were afterwards sold to the late Duke of Brunswick. The price placed upon them in London was $15,000. We value them at $10,000. If they were the pure white or blue-white stone the cost would be enormous."

Snatched From the Grave.

My wife was at the brink of the grave. She had been given up to die by three of Allegheny City's best physicians. They all pronounced her disease consumption. Her finger-nails and lips were blue; was pulseless at the wrist. We were all called to witness her death. At this moment a neighbor brought in Dr. Hartman, who prescribed a teaspoonful of Peruna every hour. She improved from the first dose, and in a week she was up, and now (less than six months) she is well. See page 30 in the "Ills of Life," a book you can get gratis from your druggist. If not, address Dr. Hartman, Osborn, Ohio.

California.

The California Democrat says that, notwithstanding the large dimensions which wine culture has attained in California, the American resident of that state has failed as yet to take to wine drinking as a habit. The Napa valley is filled with luxuriant vineyards, but foreigners remark with surprise that on entering the inns of that section of the state they not only look about in vain to see wine drinkers, but are not always sure of being able to get wine to drink themselves. Strong liquors are still the staple beverages. Grapes are not much in demand, even for table use. The traveler would never suppose from the food and drink of the people that he was in a country where luscious grapes were grown and good wines made.

Good Words from Druggists.

"Malt Bitters are the best 'bitters.'"

"They promote sleep and allay nervousness."

"Best Liver and Kidney medicine we sell."

"They knock the 'Chills' every time."

"Consumptive people gain flesh on them."

"Malt Bitters have no rivals in this town."

"Best thing for nursing mothers we have."

"We like to recommend Malt Bitters."

A Profitable Station.

Leaving local traffic out of the calculation, it is said that more travelers use the railroad station in Kansas City than any other in America, a number of important lines coming together at that point. The keeper of the restaurant has to pay a rental of $20,000 a year.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer.

It is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from all dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which sulphur, sugar of lead, and nitrate of silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggists for it. Each bottle is warranted. Smith, Kline & Co., Wholesale Agents, Philadelphia, and C. N. Crittenton, New York. 14 24 1y

Accidentally Shot while Hunting.

The first serious casualty of the hunting season occurred near Lewistown. The Free Press, of that place, relates the particulars as follows:

"William M. Wimer, of Lewistown, while out hunting on the mountain back of W. T. Shimp's residence, in Granville township, Monday morning, met with a serious accident. It appears about 9 o'clock Mr. Wimer sat down on a large stone for the purpose of eating a lunch, and while in the act of reaching into his hunting pouch to get the same he received a bullet in his left side a few inches below the shoulder. He immediately rose to his feet and saw that Samuel Calahan had fired the unfortunate shot. Mr. Calahan explained the accident by saying that he mistook Mr. Wimer's pouch for a turkey's tail and fired. Neither of the parties knew of the other's presence on the mountain. The two at once started for William Shimp's residence, but the distance being considerable Mr. W. gave out before they reached it. Mr. Calahan proceeded on down the mountain and on his way met a couple of Mr. Shimp's sons, to whom he related what had occurred. They went to where Mr. Wimer was, by which time he had sufficiently rested as to be able to walk the remainder of the distance. Dr. Dean was immediately summoned, who did everything possible to find the ball, but was unsuccessful. Tuesday the railroad officials had provided a car, and he was brought to town and conveyed to his residence across the creek on Hale street. Mr. Wimer was not expected to live over Tuesday evening."

—John Hancock was elected to Congress from the Tenth district, Texas. John, it seems, will never die.

—The temperature was moderate enough for comfortable promenading Wednesday evening of last week.

—A letter addressed to Mr. William Myers, Solon P. O., Centre county, Pa., is held at the post office in this place.

—General Beaver is at his law office attending to business, just the same as if he had not been a candidate for Governor.

—Another fog obscured the sun Thursday morning. Old Sol refuses to shine on this distracted Democratic country.

—John Anderson says he is sorry for us. Thanks, John, but we are ungrateful enough to suspect that you don't more'n half mean it.

—How's that? Hunter 186 and Meyer 448 over Rhoads. At that rate Centre county can soon send Republican Assemblymen to Harrisburg.

—The Altoona sauer-kraut factory plugs along at the rate of thirty barrels of the "stuff" a day. So what's the use of growling about the election?

—P. Gray Meek's head has shrunk sufficiently to allow him to wear his Pattison plug hat. It was feared for a while that the tile would have to be enlarged.

—There are indications that some of Bellefonte's excited Democrats will be fit candidates for a lunatic asylum if something isn't done immediately to check their idiotic demonstrations.

—The immense popularity of Mr. Daniel Rhoads almost elected him. The vote he received in this hot-bed of Democracy is a decided compliment and he has reason to feel proud of it.

—We are exceedingly grateful to D. H. Hastings, Esq., and Manager Malin, of the Western Union Telegraph office, for favors received from them on Tuesday evening of last week.

—The tabulated election returns of Centre county will be found in another part of this issue. They will be valuable for reference and should be preserved by those who are at all interested in politics.

—It is said that a barrel of prime whiskey was on draught at the Democratic headquarters in the Conrad House on election night, which no doubt accounts for the riotous street proceedings on that night. Glorious Democracy!

—Two hundred thousand people are asked to contribute a nickel apiece to build a church in Texas. It should be called the church of St. Nickel-us, and when it is in operation it is to be hoped the old Nickel have less to do in Texas.

—On Monday evening, the 5th instant, a valuable horse and a first-class spring wagon, were stolen from their owner, Mr. Herman Miller, who resides at Pleasant Gap. It is suspected that the offender is a well known person who has already acquired some notoriety as a thief and who has infested that locality for a long time. Parties have started in pursuit of the thief and are on his track.

—A brilliant wedding was solemnized in St John's Catholic church, at Altoona, on Wednesday, the 8th. The contracting parties were Alfred V. D. Watterson, Esq., of Pittsburg, and Miss Gussie Jeffords, of Altoona. The celebrant was the Rt. Rev. Bishop John A. Watterson, of Columbus, Ohio, brother of the groom. It was the most brilliant social event witnessed in Altoona for a long time past.

—The horse, spring wagon and harness stolen from Mr. H. K. Miller, of Pleasant Gap, has not yet been recovered. They were very valuable and Mr. Miller offers a reward of $150 for the apprehension of the thief and the return of his property, $50 for the return of the horse or $100 for the thief alone. Parties are on the track of the thief and it is thought that he went in an eastern direction. We expect to hear of his capture soon.

Cuticura

THE NEW BLOOD PURIFIER

Resolvent

I will now state that I made a miraculous cure of one of the worst cases of skin disease known. The patient is a man forty years old; had suffered fifteen years. His eyes, scalp and nearly his whole body presented a frightful appearance. Had had the attention of twelve different physicians, who prescribed the best remedies known to the profession, such a Iodide potassium, arsenic, corrosive sublimate, sarsaparilla, etc. Had paid $500 for medical treatment with but little relief. I prevailed upon him to use Cuticura Resolvent internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. He did so and was completely cured. The skin on his head, face, and many other parts of his body, which presented a most loathsome appearance, is now as soft and smooth as an infant's, with no scar or trace of the disease left behind. He has now been cured twelve months.
Reported by
F. H. BROWN, Esq., Barnwell, S. C.

SCROFULA SORE.

Rev. Dr. ——, in detailing his experience with the Cuticura Remedies, said that through Divine Providence one of his parishioners was cured of a scrofulous sore, which was slowly draining away his life, by the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. The poison that had fed the disease was completely driven out.

ECZEMA.

Sixteen months since an eruption broke out on my legs and both feet, which turned out to be Eczema, and caused me great pain and annoyance. I tried various remedies with no good results, until I used the Cuticura Resolvent internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, which entirely cured me so that my skin is as smooth and natural as ever.
LEN. M. FRAILEY, 64 South St., Baltimore.

CUTICURA.

The Cuticura treatment for the cure of Skin, Scalp and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of Cuticura Resolvent, the new Blood Purifier, and the external use of Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, the Great Skin Cures.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting with the many herbs of Calcutta, he accidentally made a preparation which cured his only child of Consumption. His child is now in this country, and enjoying the best of health. He has proved to the world that Consumption can be positively and permanently cured. The doctor now gives this Recipe free, only asking two three-cent stamps to pay expenses. This herb also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address

Just published, a new edition of DR. CULVERWELL'S CELEBRATED ESSAY on the radical cure of SPERMATORRHŒA or Seminal weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by Self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, &c.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self abuse may be radically cured; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

—A large congregation was present in the Reformed church on Sunday morning. Rev. Prof. D. M. Wolf, of Spring Mills, conducted the service. The invocation to the throne of grace was a model of beauty. The sermon also was appropriate and edifying and was listened to with close attention.

—The Philadelphia Times continues to make Pattison's plurality in Centre county 1100 instead of 897. If Pattison's pluralities in other counties are similarly over-estimated the official figures will reduce his plurality in the State very considerably. The Times should give figures more correctly.

—"A token of gratitude," in the shape of a gift of $1,500 was bestowed upon Princeton college by one of her children in his will the other day. Dr. R. D. Morris, of Oxford, Ohio, was the grateful son who thus remembered in his old age the life long benefits which his collegiate training conferred upon him.

JUBILANT DEMOCRATS.

The Illuminations and Decorations of Saturday Night—A Poor Parade—Good Feeling Exhibited by all Parties.

On Saturday the sky was clouded and everybody predicted rain. But the rain did not fall, which goes to show that the only mission of the clouds was to vail the face of the sun from this distressed Democratic country.

Consequently, the "dems" had good weather for their immense jubilee, which was appointed for that day to signalize the victory of November 7. During the day elaborate decorations were made and preparations undertaken for an illumination in the evening. Printed notices told the Hancock Legion to meet at their headquarters at 6:30 p. m.

Evening came and also two bands of music from the country. Then the people began to assemble, and from that time until 10 p. m. the streets were a scene of bustle and excitement. The bands played and the people listened and yelled. One by one the Chinese lanterns, which were suspended in artistic rows on the outside of the buildings, began to exhibit their bright colors; the thousand and one candles inside the windows became visible and the light which radiated from these sources exposed to view numerous flags, portraits, &c.

The illuminations and decorations were quite handsome, although some prominent members of the Democratic party did not illuminate at all. On High street the Watchman office and the residence of P. Gray Meek were gorgeous under a wealth of candles and lanterns. A row of Chinese lanterns extended the entire length of the Bush House. Small collections of the same illuminating devises were grouped in front of Smith's bakery and Kirk's drug store, respectively. The gunsmith shop of Theo. Deschner, Richards jewelry store and Heisler's tombstone establishment each assumed a Democratic appearance so far as a display of stars and stripes would contribute to that effect. Adam Hoy, Esq's., residence and also that of Isaac Guggenheimer were resplendent with lanterns. The decorations at Governor Curtin's residence were simple and elegant and the illuminations particularly pure and chaste, the interior of the house being brilliant with gas light, and its egress barred only by a few choice potted plants and flowers placed near the windows. Major Reynolds' bank building was faintly illuminated and Garman's hotel was brilliant in the extreme, bunting, flags and lanterns contributing to the general effect. Further up the street the residences of C. M. Bower, Esq., and "Cap" Mingle were conspicuous and Fort Dunkle outrivaled the efforts of former years at that very prominent building. Again coming down High street, the residences of ex-Mayor Sternberg, H. Y. Stitzer and Hon. S. T. Shugert displayed bright colors, which completed the illuminations of that thoroughfare.

On Allegheny street the Brockerhoff House, Dr. Hoy's medical headquarters, D. F. Fortney's law office, John Moore's residence and the beer saloons constituted the illuminations south of High street. North of the latter thoroughfare Mr. Page's residence was tastefully illuminated with candles below and colored paper above; J. P. Gephart's residence was prettily illuminated and also that of County Treasurer Keller. The Lane residence and grounds were as brilliant as usual, and perhaps presented the finest appearance of any single establishment. George Jackson's residence completed the Allegheny street list of illuminations.

On Linn street Prothonotary Harper's residence and grounds exhibited rejoicing and Major Reynolds' house was exceedingly brilliant. The illumination of Mr. H. Sechler's residence showed taste in the bright colored paper which covered the upper windows with a collection of lanterns below. Mr. Jenkins' residence displayed light from every window. The decorations and illuminations of Judge John Orvis' residence were, as usual, quite elaborate. The residence of Major Forster on West Linn street was illuminated. On Spring street Mr. Robert McKnight's, Messrs. Augustus and O. S. Hoover's and Mrs. Dare's residences were tastefully illuminated, the former with an elaborate display of bright colored paper artistically arranged in the windows. The other illuminations were Sheriff Kline's residence, the residence of Mrs. Hoover and also the house of Mr. John Wagner.

On Bishop street Cedar's bakery was bright with Chinese lanterns and also the several establishments of the Brown Brothers, near the corner of Allegheny and Bishop. Mr. Jackson's house further east on the same street was also illuminated. This about completed as fine an illumination as could be expected on the occasion of a Democratic celebration.

Of the parade it is not necessary to say much. It consisted only of a couple of hundred men straggling along with torches and preceded by a half dozen marshals. The banners bore very appropriate inscriptions, such as "Pattison's older than he was last week," "Did you hear anything drop?" "The political Jumbo of the 19th century," &c.

During the evening fireworks of a very ordinary description were exploded and dynamite caps, the reports of which were loud enough to discount thunder, were exploded on jail hill.

After the parade was over a meeting was held in the Court House. It was well attended and the speeches were made by the Democratic orators of this place, and were all well received.

While Senator C. T. Alexander was speaking, Col. D. H. Hastings was noticed in the audience, and the crowd began to call for him He settled down in his seat so as to avoid notice, but when Alexander had finished speaking the house resounded with calls for "Hastings." Chairman Forster, Prothonotary Harper, J. L. Spangler, J. H. Reifsnyder and others went down the aisle to where he was sitting and took him bodily out of his seat. When he found there was no way out of it, he took Chairman Forster's arm and was escorted to the bench. Here he was received with outbursts of applause. Chairman Forster said: "Mr. Chairman and fellow Democrats, I have the pleasure of presenting to you Col. Hastings, the Chairman of the Republican committee of this county. He waged an unrelenting warfare on us during this campaign and the returns show the inroads he made upon our party. But his warfare was an open, manly one, and we appreciate him as a foeman worthy of our steel. He never made a speech to a Democratic audience before, and I ask you to listen to him respectfully, because I suspect he will have something to say."

When the applause subsided Col. Hastings spoke in substance as follows: "Did you ever attend a funeral when the funeral sermon was preached by the corpse? If you never did you cannot form an idea of my feelings.

"The only thing about this great disaster to the country that I can take any satisfaction out of is the fact that you people all feel so good over it. No wonder, you have been feeding on the husks for the last twenty years, and we have had the loaves and fishes.

"We expected to keep you wandering in the wilderness the Scriptural period of forty years. Now you think you are out of the woods, but you are not. We only gave you a glimpse of the promised land. In '84 we will come forward reunited, reinforced from your own ranks, and we will win a victory and have a jollification that this show won't be a "patching" to. For the present I can stand it if you can. I am like the fellow who was urged to join the church. He withstood all importunities for a time, and then consented to join. He said he 'guessed he could stand it if the church could.' Bring on your reform now; wipe out your bosses; reduce the taxes, and make your promises good."

The speaker referred to the open and fair campaign which Chairman Forster had conducted for the Democratic party and said nothing else than honorable treatment could have been expected from a battle-scarred old veteran of two wars. He said the Democracy deserved great credit for the dignified manner in which this jubilee had been conducted. The only personal thing that was done during the procession was the halting that Salt River boat in front of his house for over half an hour. Not one of their speakers had referred to Gen. Beaver, the defeated candidate, in other than most respectful terms. Indeed they appeared to vie with each other in paying tribute to his record as a soldier, his sterling abilities and manly worth, and his blameless life as a neighbor and citizen. "I was for Beaver from the beginning," said the speaker. "I am for Beaver now, and shall continue to be. And some of you were for him. For, whenever in this county an Independent voted against him there were two Democrats to take his place. While he found in Pattison a worthy and honorable foeman, we will yet see the day when he will be honored by the people of this commonwealth as he deserves to be. For myself I declare to you in the paraphrase of Walter Scott that

> If again he lift a lance
> Or try again another chance
> He'll find Old Torquil will not lack
> If he haven't a voter at his back."

The speaker, continuing, said that in a Republican government the will of the majority was supreme. He submitted to the will of the majority resignedly. For some wise purpose Providence had brought this great affliction upon us, and we must submit. "Besides you haven't got so much to boast of, after all. Pattison is now as much our Governor as he is yours. He will be governor for Republicans as well as for Democrats, and we will throw the Independents in.

"When your orators fired their volleys of invective at my party I only "juked" a little, because I knew they did not mean it. I had heard them before. You are welcome to this victory, but you had to call on disgruntled Republicans to help you out though. You are welcome to Ben. Butler, too. I don't believe he ever stole those spoons, anyway!"

After the adjournment of the meeting the crowd, headed by Chairman Forster and the Washington Cornet Band, marched out Allegheny street to General Beaver's residence and tendered him a serenade. Chairman Forster explained the object of their friendly call, and J. L. Spangler, Esq., in a ringing speech, gave the General and the crowd to understand, that no man should say the evening's celebration was intended as disrespectful to him.

They had called to express in this manner their respect for a neighbor and citizen whom all admired and honored. He had led a most gallant assault against them. It was a forlorn hope, but he came out of the battle without a scar or a stain. The General responded in a pleasant little speech and the crowd, after bidding him good night, dispersed.

Ninety Years Old.

On Friday, the venerable Dr. William I. Wilson, of this place, reached his ninetieth birthday. The event was not observed by his friends in any other manner than by a quiet tea-drinking at his residence on the Thursday evening previous, at which a few of his relatives were present and the events of former days were recounted with that zest which always inspires those who participate in such gatherings.

Dr. William Wilson is a son of Hugh Wilson, of Buffalo township and a grandson of Thomas Wilson, who came from the Irish settlement in Northampton county to Buffalo Valley.

The Doctor was born November 10, 1793, read medicine with Dr. James Dougal, Sr., and came to Centre county 1818, locating at Earleystown, Potter twp., which was then a village of importance in this county with a fair chance of becoming the county seat. It now consists of only two or three houses. He married Mary P., granddaughter of General James Potter. After living many years at Earleystown, he removed to Potter's Bank, where his home was known as the seat of a profuse and elegant hospitality. His practice was very extensive, extending into Brush Valley and into Kishacoquillas, Mifflin Co. He performed most of his journeys on horseback and was for more than forty years actively engaged in practice. During the years in which he engaged in active medical practice a large number of students read the mysteries of the healing science with him and became prominent physicians. He has not practiced to any considerable extent for the last twenty years. Though his health of late has been much impaired, he was able to vote at the last election. Three of his daughters reside with him at his home in this place. Another daughter, Catharine, is the wife of Hon. A. G. Curtin. Surrounded by such loving relatives and friends his declining years will be filled with the peace which an upright life merits.

The Social Reception.

Mr. Charles F. Cook, Edwin F. Garman, J. W. Miller and other members of the Y. M. C. A. in this place attended the social reception which opened the district convention at Centre Hall, on Friday evening. The first two mentioned returned on Friday evening and reported a most enjoyable time. Delegates were present from State College and other places and about 70 young men attended the reception. Refreshments of an elegant description were spread for the delectation of the guests and were partaken of in a manner for which the young man with a hearty appetite is peculiar. The music rendered is worthy of especial mention. The gentlemen of the place have organized a very fine orchestra, which was present, and all the airs given were listened to with close attention and were much appreciated. Mr. Frank Shock elicited especial admiration for the excellent manner in which he rendered several cornet solos. That the convention would be a great success was demonstrated by Friday night's reception —Our Democratic friends—for a wonder—were orderly and well behaved on Saturday evening. The entire demonstration was creditable.

Personal Pencilings.

Mrs. S. T. Shugert returned home on Saturday after a long visit in Harrisburg.

Mr. David Lieb prepared an interesting lesson for the Boys' Branch meeting on Monday evening.

Clement Dale, Esq., departed for Huntingdon on Tuesday to attend the reunion of the 49th Pa. Vols.

Miss Maggie Haupt, daughter of Mr. Simeon Haupt, of this place, who has been visiting friends in Altoona, Houtzdale and other cities, returned home on Saturday.

Mrs. Wylie, wife of Rev. W. T. Wylie, has returned to Bellefonte after a few weeks' absence. We are pleased to learn that she will remain all winter, the guest of Mrs. Livingstone.

Rev. S. A. Taggart, who has been spending a few days in Centre Hall passed through Bellefonte on Tuesday on his return trip. He was accompanied by Mr. Dinges of that place.

Mr. J. C. Brachbill, of Curwensville, spent Sunday at the home of his parents in this place. He reports business very prosperous in Curwensville and the furniture trade particularly active. We are pleased to learn of his financial prosperity.

Misfortunes of a Centre County Man.

Mr. Philip B. Stover, who formerly resided in Brush Valley and is now living in Pleasant Valley, Lincoln county, Kas., writes to friends in Millheim a letter descriptive of certain misfortunes which have recently befallen him. The letter is published in the Millheim Journal.

It appears that on the 30th of October a large part of his property was destroyed by a prairie fire, which he and his neighbors battled as desperately as they could, but were not able to check it before it had damaged his property to a ruinous extent. He says: "All my feed, excepting about three tons of hay and a little cornfodder standing in the field, was burnt up. About 15 tons of hay, 100 shocks of fodder, 100 bushels of corn and my hog pen were all consumed, and the granery badly damaged. We worked all night to keep the fire from the buildings. I am so roasted and broken down by the terrible heat that I can't do anything since. I am so nervous and my hands are so burnt that I can scarcely write. My loss is $200." He concludes by petitioning his relatives and friends for assistance.

A Notable Wedding.

A somewhat remarkable wedding was celebrated in Williamsport on Thursday evening. Col. Jacob Sallade, formerly owner of the Sun and Banner, of that city, was married to Mrs. Agnes D. Oliver, a well-known resident. Mrs. Mussina, a venerable lady, officiated as one of the bridesmaids. A singular incident of the happy occasion and one which will ever be full of pleasant recollections to all the parties was that Mrs. Oliver had presided in the same capacity at Mrs. Mussina's wedding, forty-nine years before. Mrs. Myers, the other bridesmaid, also served in a similar position at Mrs. Oliver's first wedding. All the parties were over fifty years of age. The happy couple started on an extensive wedding tour which will include Geneva, Syracuse, Albany, New York City, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Richmond, arriving at Washington at the opening of Congress and thence return home about Christmas.

—The Methodist literary sociable, which took place on Friday evening, was the most enjoyable ever held by that congregation. The lecture room of the church was filled. The programme of exercises, which was prepared by the lady members of the committee appointed for that purpose, showed great taste and judgment and was just long enough to be carried out in every detail without wearying the audience. Among the most interesting exercises was a Scripture recital by some of the members of the Sunday school and the paper, which was prepared by Miss Swartz, and was sufficiently brief and spicy to attract and hold the attention of the audience from beginning to end. All the exercises showed more than ordinary preparation, the credit for which is to be given to the ladies.

—A certain gentleman accompanied a lady home from an evening's entertainment last night. The lady did not like the gentleman's company, but she had no other alternative than to accept it. Before they parted at the gate he asked, "May I come to see you on Sunday evening?" Again she did not like to refuse him, so she said: "Oh yes, you may come as my friend, but not as my fellow." He has almost concluded not to go at all.

—Messrs. P. B. Crider & Son have erected a neat frame office near their planing mill at this place.

—Ex-Governor Curtin's majority in Centre county foots up over 1700, nearly double that of Pattison's. Boggs township, his old home, gave him 280 votes, 88 more than Pattison received, and Bellefonte borough gave him 200 of a majority over Orwig, the Republican candidate. Certainly these figures are a strong proof of the Ex-Governor's popularity at home. They also prove that his friends and supporters are satisfied with his record made in the 47th Congress, and that their confidence in him as a true representative of the people is unshaken. The Governor has good reasons for feeling gratified with his vote in Centre county.

—About twenty boys are now employed at the Nail Works.
